OTHG History by John Justus

10 years ago August 2011
President Bill Ensley wrote about the hot weather we were having. With all the heat a lot of our members were out of town. Due to these reasons the club had not held our Wednesday night cruise for several weeks. Garry Querry's history article (covering the year 2001) mentioned that the club had 30 members. Bill Morris was the the subject of the member profile. Dick Raczuk did not have a shop tip article for this month. The car of the month was Tim McGuire's 1935 Ford Cabriolet. There was no mention of a 50/50 winner. There were about three pages of "for sale" ads. In addition to the usual car parts there were ads for a boat and an enclosed car trailer. There was no mention of a 50\50 winner.

July has flown by and August is here with cooler weather...we hope.

We will be taking a trip ✈️ to Washington the second week of August. Looking forward to seeing our 6 kids, 13 grandchildren and 13 great grandkids. 🧒🧒

I will also harvest my last crop of wheat and retire from the farm. Turning it over to the kids has been a huge decision for me but it is a good one. Life is full of changes, as most of you know. Stay safe and stay well.

As we get older, it's a good idea to hang signs around the shop to remind you of lessons learned along the way. The sign on the drill press is the drive belt P/N. It will save time if it ever breaks again and I have to find the part number of the belt.

I saw this on the internet and thought it would be a good idea to pass it along. This tip especially holds true (in my opinion) to older engines. ...DICK

“How long should a car sit before changing oil?”

Perhaps a better way of thinking about this is: How hot should my engine be in order to change its oil? Warming up the engine to operating temperature is beneficial for an oil change because as the engine — the entire engine — warms, any sludge or deposits — including moisture — are more likely to be absorbed or carried away by the oil and will hopefully drain to the oil pan (sometimes called the “sump”). Draining the oil then — while the oil is still warm/hot will help flush those contaminants out of your engine.

Obviously, the oil in an engine that has been at operating temperature for a few minutes is going to be hot, so one needs to take some precautions not to get splashed with the hot oil, as it can cause burns ... or at least significant discomfort and the utterance of several choice words (or maybe the repeated utterance of one choice word, in particular). Heavy rubber gloves can help with this, as can a face shield, but really just being careful and trying to avoid splashing of the hot oil should be sufficient.

Let the oil drain completely so that as many of the contaminants as possible are flushed from your engine. Once I get the oil draining, that’s often when I’ll remove and replace the old oil filter with a new one, and do some other things like grease any greaseable joints (like tie rod ends or ball joints), check the other fluids (brake fluid, coolant, windshield washer, etc.) and maybe even check things like air in the tires (and tire condition) and the windshield wiper condition. If it’s a customer car I’ll glance at brakes, suspension components, the exhaust, fuel and brake lines, and even the chassis and body for signs of rust or damage. When the oil reaches the slow-drip phase, I’ll clean the drain plug and reinstall it, then I’ll use a rag to wipe up the underside of the engine and any chassis components that might’ve gotten oil on them, to hopefully minimize any dripping later, then dump in the appropriate volume of fresh oil of the proper, manufacturer-recommended viscosity, which these days is often quite thin — a lot of cars now use 0w20 or 0w30 oil, which pours about like water, but works well for modern engines with tighter tolerances and low-friction components.

So, while it’s tempting to want to drain the oil when the engine is stone cold, it’s actually best to get it fully warmed up first, let it operate that way for a few minutes (to get the contaminants suspended in the oil) then shut off the engine and do your oil change ... being mindful of the then hot oil so that you don’t get burned.

I hope this information is helpful and interesting.

Finger Saver PUSH Sticks

I have recommended this before, but I'm sure a lot of us need reminders. Use some sort of push stick when band sawing, especially when cutting small pieces. If you happen to cut off your finger, shut off the bandsaw and vacuum up the chips. Find your finger, put it in a bag and start looking for your keys.
